PREFACE.

SEVENTEEN years ago to-day I formed a determination to bring out a series of dictionaries, English and Hindustani, for the youth of India. The knowledge of the great want of better dictionaries, the disgrace to have certain ones used in American Mission schools which were used, the opportunity this kind of book afforded to properly represent truth, and a sympathy with the thousands seeking, against many difficulties, to understand our tongue were some of the many reasons which led to the work being undertaken.

The work has never sought the opinions of the literary public. No doubt they have been accorded, however, for of the different editions, there have been published to date, 156,000 copies of the Popular Dictionary; 50,000 of the Royal School; 10,000 copies of the Gem, and 10,000 copies of the English and Hindi Dictionaries: a total of 226,000 copies: and of these not five thousand copies remain in stock. This sale may be taken as one of the indication of the growth of the use of the English language in India. It may also be stated that some ten small consignments of the Popular Dictionary have been made to England, several to Aden, Africa, the West Indies, and the Mauritius.

In the prepaaration of the Royal Dictionary we have aimed to give vocabularies of words, spoken and written, in ordinary use; meanings generally known; common idioms, in the highest degree necessary in order to understand a foreigner's speech; the parts of speech, and also we have tried to indicate the original language from which each word has been taken for incorporation into the Hindustani language.

I acknowledge the great help the dictionaries of Platt, Fallon, Forbes, Richardson and those vernacular ones printed in Lahore and Lucknow have afforded me. Also my thanks are accorded to the Indian scholars, Munshies and Pundits, who have assisted me.

Explanation of Diacritical Marks used in Roman-Urdu.

a	unmarked = ا or ﹷ	sounded as	a in *a*lone.
á	marked = آ or ﹻ	,,	,,	a in *f*ar.
e	never marked = ے or ﹾ	,,	,,	e in th*e*y.
i	unmarked = ِ or ﹺ	,,	,,	i in p*i*n.
í	marked = ی or ﹽ	,,	,,	i in mach*i*ne.
o	never marked = ُ or ﻮ	,,	,,	o in n*o*te.
u	unmarked = ُ or ﹸ	,,	,,	u in p*u*ll.
ú	marked = ُ or ﻮ	,,	,,	u in r*u*le.

'a 'i 'u = ﹶ ﹻ ﹸ respectively. Their sound is somewhat like above, but very guttural, to be learned only by hearing them used. In some fonts the Roman equivalent for ﹶ is marked by a dot under the vowel.

q = ق the guttural Arabic k; it has no equivalent in English.

ḳh = خ the guttural Arabic kh, pronounced as though hawking to clear the roof of the mouth is similar to Scotch ch in lo*ch* or German ch in bu*ch*; it has no equivalent in English.

ġ = غ the Arabic guttural g, somewhat like the sound of gargling the throat or clearing lower part of throat; it has no equivalent in English.

ṭ = ط or ﻁ; ḍ = ض, unmarked, are softer than the English letters, nearly as soft as lisping these letters spoken with the tongue almost between the teeth, somewhat as t in after and d in subdue, where the t and d are slightly held in check by the labials r and b preceding them.

ḍ = ڈ and ṭ = ٹ are harder than English letters d and t. They are spoken with the tongue turned back in the roof of the mouth in position to trill the letter r. They correspond fairly well to d and t following r in hard and art.

Athlete, ath'lēt', n. G. athlos. (a wrestler) pahlwán, kushtí baz.

ḳh, dh, ṯh, ḏh, are simply the above sounds ; t, d, ṭ, ḍ aspirated; th, ṯh should never be sounded like th in *th*in or in *th*is.

n̲ is the sound of ng in ing.

r unmarked is not trilled ; it is a gentle sound of r like r in *r*ue.

ṛ marked is trilled ; its nearest English equivalent is the r in whi*r* or like the second r in bar*r*el.

The apostrophe following a vowel as a' in such words as fá'ida simply prolongs the sound of the vowel and introduces the following consonant with sound of short i preceding it and should be pronounced almost as though written fá-ida; this must not be confounded with the apostrophe representing ع in some type as explained above.

s=ث or ص or س all pronounced alike, as s in *s*ee, and never has the "z" sound as s in *w*as ;—similarly z=ذ, ض, ظ ; all have simple sound of z, as z in *z*inc.

All other vowels, diphthongs, and consonants are exactly like their English equivalents.

KEY TO THE PRONUNCIATION OF ENGLISH WORDS.

THE consonants employed in the Phonetic spelling, with the exception of g, retain their name sounds, and the vowels, unless marked, retain their short sounds. The diphthong au or aw represents the sound of a, as heard in all ; ou or ow, that of ow, as in now; and oo unmarked as in book ; the short sound of o͝o, as in m o͝on. The sharp sound of th is indicated by common letters, as in thin; the flat sound by small capitals, as in THen. The syllabic sound of ble, whether terminal or incidental, is represented by bl. By referring to the following key, it will be seen that the notation of long and peculiar vowel sounds is remarkably simple :—

Fāte, fär ; mē, her ; mīne ; nōte ; tūne ; mo͝on.
